Effectively managing all aspects of contaminated land sites is much like mastering a complex jigsaw puzzle! All the pieces must fit together to tell the story, from the initial desktop historical assessments, to in field assessments, sampling, sample transfer, laboratory, data analysis and interpretation, reporting, administrative and auditing assessment through to potential legal aspects associated with impacts upon the receiving environment.

This jigsaw requires many hands that need to understand their role and responsibilities so that they can work together to complete the picture including land owners, lessees, developers, consultants, scientists, infield support services, couriers, laboratory staff, regulators, contaminated land auditors, lawyers.

Our speakers and topics for part one are:

Kelly Gleeson – Manager, Dept of Environment and Heritage Protection. Current and future regulatory approach to administration of Contaminated Land in Queensland.

Bray May – Principal Environmental Engineer, Certified Contaminated Land Auditor, Epic Environmental. The role of the contaminated land auditor and how to avoid the common issues experienced during the report assessment process.
